THE RORSCHACH METHOD OF PERSONALITY APPRAISAL

This course is designed for persons whose work includes the appraisal of personality or for those who wish to prepare themselves for such work. It will be of interest to the individual who wishes to learn the Rorschach in a detailed, thorough way; it is not designed for those who wish a brief overview of the Rorschach test. The aim is to produce reliable Rorschach interpreters through intensive group work and continuous individual supervision in scoring, calculation and interpretation. Tests and assignments are an integral and essential part of the course. Lecture periods will be 2½ hours and it is estimated that an additional 4 to 6 hours per week of the students' own time will be required to cope with home exercises and assignments.

This course consists of two separate parts in two semesters. Entrance into the second part is conditional on successful completion of the first.

The scoring method to be taught is a development of the original, continental Rorschach method. It is a detailed, exact approach which requires much careful work in the training period. When mastered it is considered to make possible a more reliable and comprehensive analysis than other methods.

The course assumes no previous experience with the Rorschach and is therefore suitable both for beginners and those experienced in other Rorschach approaches. The first term will deal with administration and scoring, the second with quantitative methods of interpretation. To be eligible for the course, students are required to hold at least an honour B.A. in psychology or have completed successfully the qualifying year for the M.A. degree in psychology. It is hoped the course may appeal to many who have higher formal academic qualifications but lacked the opportunity for applied training. Some consideration will be given to persons whose training, while not strictly psychological, is of equivalent standard in a related field. Qualifications of initial successful completion of this course will be attested by a letter, and will qualify the graduate for a possible advance course of Rorschach studies in a subsequent year. This will deal mostly with qualitative methods of interpretation and special applications of the method, particularly to the area of pathology.
